What Cookies Are

Cookies are small files placed on a device by a website or related technology. Similar technologies may include pixels, tags, local storage, analytics identifiers, and tracking scripts.

Types of Cookies We May Use

- Essential cookies required for website functionality and security.
- Analytics cookies that help us understand traffic, usage, performance, and user experience.
- Preference cookies that remember settings or form progress.
- Advertising or remarketing cookies that may support campaign measurement and audience building where permitted.
- Third-party cookies used by vendors such as scheduling, CRM, analytics, marketing, or payment platforms.

How We Use Cookies

We may use cookies to operate the website, measure performance, improve services, remember preferences, support lead capture, understand marketing performance, and protect against fraud or misuse.

Your Choices

You can usually disable or delete cookies in browser settings. Some website features may not work properly if cookies are disabled. Where a cookie banner or consent tool is provided, your choices may be managed through that tool.

Third-Party Tools

Third-party tools may set their own cookies according to their policies. We encourage users to review third-party privacy and cookie policies.
