This Telehealth Disclaimer applies to virtual care, online consultations, provider review, scheduling, video visits, and related telehealth workflows.

Telehealth Limitations

Telehealth may not be appropriate for all conditions, patients, medications, or jurisdictions. Providers may require additional information, in-person evaluation, labs, records, or referral to another provider.

State-Specific Rules

Telehealth services are subject to state and federal laws, provider licensing, prescribing rules, scope-of-practice limits, consent requirements, and other regulations. Availability may vary by state and service line.

Technology Limitations

Telehealth depends on internet, video, audio, device, software, and platform availability. Technical problems may require rescheduling, phone follow-up, or alternative care pathways.

Clinical Judgment

Licensed providers retain responsibility for clinical judgment and may decline to provide treatment or prescriptions when not clinically appropriate.
